Local foods are FRESH! Because there is a shorter distance from farm to fork, foods grown locally can be picked at the peak of freshness to make them look, taste, and be better for you.

There are so many benefits to buying locally that may not be obvious to the average grocery store shoppers. Beyond being fresher, buying your food from local producers is environmentally, economically, and socially responsible.

Buying locally helps you ensure the foods you’re feeding your family are healthy and sustainable. Most small, local producers practice sustainable agriculture that is better for the environment. Local farmers selling directly to their neighbors will be honest about their growing practices because they are more likely to be held accountable. Learn exactly where your food is coming from by asking the farmers themselves how they grew it. If you are especially curious visit one of the many Agritourism operations in the Valley who can not only tell you, but also show you where your food is grown.

Buying local isn’t just better for you it also helps your community to thrive. When you shop at nearby farmers markets and farm stands, you’re helping someone in your community feed their family and keep their business alive. The dollars you spend there are more likely to stay circulating to other local businesses to create more jobs.

If all of these local businesses can survive it helps to create a vibrant, wholesome culture in your community. It’s especially beneficial for local farmers to prosper so that our land can continue to be sustainably cultivated to provide essential services to the environment. Buying locally is an easy way to give back to the Valley in more ways than one.
Shenandoah Valley’s Buy Fresh Buy Local chapter is an important link between producers and consumers. Much of our work is behind the scenes - connecting, facilitating, and working towards sustainable local and regional food systems here in the Valley. We encourage you to get to know the farms and businesses listed in the guide, as well as the sponsors and community partners. Their commitment to a local and regional food system is the reason the chapter exists.

Community partnerships are truly what sustain the Valley and the commitment to local food. Whether a sponsor, farm, business, or individual, thank you for being a part of the local food network. Each of us is an important piece of the local food quilt here in the Valley. We invite you to join the conversation with our food community at BuyLocalShenValley.org, or on Facebook or Twitter. In addition, please let us know if there are ways we can improve the guide to enhance your experience for next year. Cheers to a fantastic food 2016!

Connect with the Guide!

Many of the producers, farms, and businesses featured in the 2016 guide are expanding - not necessarily in acres! Their presence is found in abundance on social media, whether in the form of a website, Facebook page, or another media account. Shenandoah Valley Buy Fresh Buy Local has “liked” all the pages and gathered the accounts so that you can like them too. Find us on Facebook and show your neighbors some love!
Virginia offers a wealth of resources for local foodies! Check out the following list of online options for producers, farmers, and lovers of food!

BuyLocalVirginia.org: Home of the Commonwealth’s 10 Buy Fresh Buy Local chapters, this central website will let you check sources across the state.

www.VDACSVirginia.gov: Run by the Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services, this site features helpful links for Virginia Grown and Virginia’s Finest

food for thought

TRY LOCAL FIRST

Super markets have made us accustomed to having access to a wide variety of produce every day of the year. These fruits and vegetables often travel thousands of miles just to make it to your grocery store aisle, compromising freshness and taste to do so. Although you might not be able to get everything on your grocery list at your local farmers market year round, we encourage you to always try to shop local first before resorting to the produce section in a grocery store.

Plan recipes and shopping lists based on which produce is in season to support local producers. If you’re unsure of when certain fruits and vegetables are being harvested, see the Virginia Availability Calendar up above. This calendar will show you when you can get the freshest and tastiest produce grown locally, instead of settling for whatever is offered at the super market. Please take note that some farmers have greenhouses that allow them to extend their season further for your convenience. Shop local first to get food that is better for you, your family, your community and the environment!

"Every time you spend money, you’re casting a vote for the kind of world you want."
