Fresher, more delicious foods means more enjoyable meals
Less transportation, less packaging, and more responsible farming methods helps the environment
Dollars spent locally are more likely to stay locally which boosts the economy with more jobs and tax revenue

Across the great state of Virginia, Buy Fresh Buy Local chapters have been founded to advocate for local food and agriculture stakeholders. The Shenandoah Valley Chapter’s food guide is a collaborative initiative of Virginia Cooperative Extension and community partners to bring you the most up-to-date information about what is happening on the farms and local food systems across the Valley.

We want you to celebrate and take advantage of what this area offers regarding local food!

We invite you to get to know the farms and businesses listed in the guide, as well as the sponsors and community partners. Learn exactly where your food is coming from by asking farmers themselves how they grew it. Commitment to a local and regional food system from local collaborators is the reason the chapter and this guide exist.

When you visit farmer’s markets, farm stands, or local food businesses you are actively contributing to the future of agriculture in the Valley. Whether you are a sponsor, farm, business, or “foodie”, thank you for being a part of the local food network.

Cheers to another year of buying fresh & local, fantastic food!

LISTING ICONS EXPLAINED

Listings that display this icon accept SNAP and EBT benefits.
Learn more about SNAP acceptance by visiting www.fns.usda.gov/ebt/snap-and-farmers-markets

Get excited! Listings with this Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) icon offer you the chance to subscribe to a weekly or bi-weekly box of fresh local food products. Every CSA offers unique foods brought to you by local farmers.
For more info on CSAs, visit www.nal.usda.gov

Listings marked with the Agritourism icon indicate that you are invited to experience agriculture first-hand on the farm. Read business descriptions to find out when the farm is open to the public.

USDA Organic: Farms listed with this icon met the USDA standards of “organic” growing practices or sell certified organic products.
Learn more about USDA Certified Organic products by visiting www.usda.gov/topics/organic.

Thank you to all 2019–2020 Farm Friend sponsors of the guide! Farm Friend sponsors have highlighted listings.
LOOK HOW FAR YOUR DOLLARS CAN GO

A little goes a long way! If every household in our ten county region spent $10 a week on local agricultural products the Shenandoah Valley would see a $115 million dollar direct economic return.

Over $1.7 billion dollars would be generated in Virginia if every household spent $10 per week or just 10% of their annual food budget on local products.

See the map below to learn how buying local can positively impact your community!

Shenandoah Valley Region

Frederick Co. & Winchester $22 Million
Shenandoah Co. $11 Million
Highland Co. $1 Million
Bath Co. $2 Million
Rockbridge Co., Buena Vista & Lexington $9 Million
Clarke Co. $3 Million
Warren Co. $7 Million
Page Co. $6 Million
Rockingham Co. & Harrisonburg $27 Million
Augusta Co., Staunton & Waynesboro $27 Million

VIRGINIA FRUIT AND VEGETABLE AVAILABILITY CALENDAR

We encourage you to always try to shop local first before resorting to produce that traveled thousands of miles to get to your grocery store. Local protein can often be found year-round, while certain Virginia grown fruits and vegetables are "in season" during certain months of the year. Greenhouse grown foods often have extended seasons.

What is Soil Health?

The U.S. Department of Agriculture’s Natural Resources Conservation Service (USDA-NRCS) defines soil health as the capacity of a soil to maintain its function and flow of ecosystem services given a specific set of physical, chemical and environmental boundaries. Farmers know healthy soils are more productive and will produce healthier crops and animals. Some practices farmers use to keep soils healthy include composting, minimizing tillage, using cover crops, integrating crops and livestock, rotating crops, and regularly assessing soil fertility and organic matter levels. These practices improve the structure of the soil, increase the soil’s available water-holding capacity, enhance the biodiversity in the soil, and reduce soil compaction and erosion. These practices improve profitability, nutrient and pest management, and water quality.

Why does Soil Health Matter?

• High-performing productive resilient soils are needed to feed a growing population
• Crop production costs can be reduced with improved cycling of carbon, nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium, and other plant nutrients
• Profits can be improved if unnecessary inputs are reduced
• Natural resources are critically important and need to be protected
• Water quality of local waterways is improved because the soil stays in place, which reduces nutrient and sediment loss
• Biodiversity and wildlife habitat is enhanced
• There are increased dietary connections between soil health and human gut health.
